Below link is the download link:- Windows XP Portable Version This invention relates to resistance measuring and evaluating, and more particularly to evaluating the contents of a conductive liquid such as blood. An increasing number of techniques are being developed for measuring the electrical characteristics of the conductive liquid therein, in particular for analyzing the blood of a subject. In U.S. Pat. No. 3,498,276, issued Mar. 3, 1970 to C. D. Ziegler, there is disclosed a method for determining the ion activity in the blood of a subject by means of an electrode device comprising an electrically conductive liquid reservoir in combination with an electrode. The electrode is designed as a metal diaphragm permeable to gases and ions, having a gas permeable annular seal, and having a platinum wire central opening and a diaphragm and central opening with a one-to-one matchable profile. In accordance with the method of the patent, the gas is removed from the liquid and replaced with a radioactive gas such as sup.36 Cl.sub.2, and is then passed through the electrode to the detector. The detector serves to register the activity of the radioactive gas. In U.S. Pat. No. 4,111,263, issued Sept. 5, 1978 to R. D. Valentine, et al. there is disclosed a blood analyzing method and apparatus. In accordance with this method, the blood, which is generally separated from the intracranial and extracranial vessels, is circulated through an in-line
